Armed Citizen Militia Shows Up At Occupy Phoenix

Group is affiliated with neo-nazi fringe

Paul Joseph Watson

Infowars.com

October 30, 2011

Armed citizen militia group US Border Guard is making its presence felt at the Occupy Phoenix demonstration to protect free speech rights, arguing that the second amendment prevents the state from abusing the first amendment.

The group has been labeled “neo-nazis” by the Southern Poverty Law Center, which is usually a demonization tactic, but the individual shown in the clip, “JT Ready” has attended neo-nazi rallies and is closely affiliated with the fringe National Socialist Party.

The group has also operated as a “Minutemen on steroids” outfit, organizing armed patrols of the US border with Mexico.

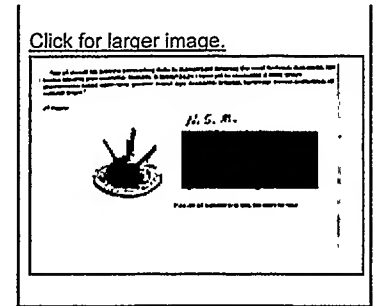

As we have previously highlighted, the fringe neo-nazi movement has been completely infiltrated by the FBI, right down to the level where an FBI informant actually got caught organizing a neo-nazi rally in Orlando back in 2007.

Is this a means of infiltrating the ‘Occupy’ movement, a minority fringe extremist group trying to attach itself to the protesters, or merely concerned citizens expressing their right to bear arms peaceably?

Opinions will undoubtedly be split, but one certainty is the fact that the establishment media instantly seized upon groups like this attaching themselves to the Tea Party rallies as a smear tactic to claim the whole movement was racist and violent. However, in the case of ‘Occupy’, the mainstream networks plans to take with him and claimed his group will stake out an area of Pinal County that drug smugglers use as a route to bring "chemical warfare into Phoenix."

Ready has grabbed more traction with local media in recent months as the debate over illegal immigration heats up. He has also appeared frequently at rallies and protests in support of Arizona's new immigration law, hoping to attract supporters to his cause.

That was no different on May 29 at the "Stand With Arizona" rally in Tempe, an event organized by several tea party groups.

Ready was there handing out fliers for the Mesa chapter of the National Socialist Movement, the largest neo-Nazi group in the United States.

The fliers carried Ready's name and a picture of a landmine. "We all should be actively advocating daily to mainstream America the most humane, non-racist, fair border security plan available," they said. "Namely, A MINEFIELD!"

The flier, photocopied on plain-white paper, carried the letters "N.S.M." as well as the address for post office box in Mesa, a local phone number and an email address that contained the number 88, a neo-Nazi code meaning "Heil Hitler."

Ready and another man told Heat City that night they handed out 1,000 fliers at the event but were having little success getting their message across.

Ready has a history of engaging in armed confrontation with immigrants.

When he was running for Mesa City Council in 2006 — a race in which he came in second place — he followed a vehicle down a dead-end street and corned a Hispanic man who later turned out to be an illegal immigrant.

Ready said the man opened fire on him with a BB gun, and he returned fire with a .38 revolver he pulled from an ankle holster.

Both escaped injury and police arrested the other man that night. A month later, the man pleaded guilty to giving a false name to authorities.

The fact that the man received such a minor charge upset Ready, who told the judge overseeing the case that the other man should have been convicted of assault. Ready called it at the time "a travesty of justice."

SORRY FOR ANY LACK OF ADVANCE NOTICE. We have to go to the WAR with the army we have. Not the army we wish we had. We have folks coming in from Cali that you can carpool with if you like. Short notice is how these battles are fought sometimes. That's why they called our forefathers Minute Men because in a minute they would go from farming or black smithing to grabbing their rifle and gear to head to battle. We have to try this. I bet if many people recieved news of free Super Bowl tickets they would haul ass to the game three states away. But fighting for our nation is a whole different issue with Americans.

We need help now. Our counties are overran. This is not just media hype. Real Narco-Terrorists with small unit engagements agaist civilians and Law Enforcement. They control the hill tops from here to the border and most choke points. It is time to take back those areas. Not give away our land to Mexico as the feds just did with the National Park Service. That's treason. I will not beg people to come. I just told three people from Utah to stay home because they whined about having to camp overnight. We are better off without the fantasy warrior wannabes or the crankster gangsters in my humble estimation.

Heck, even Grandmas who are volunteering to do whatever they can. Water, calls, letters, medical aid. So I don't feel sorry for full-grown men who bitch and moan. We have PLENTY of enemy to go around. So no need to infight at all either. Even non-whites are jumping onbaord because they are sick of the invasion, rapes, gangs, and Narco-Terrorists. So if they are even helping out, how much more should we be?

Furthermore, I am NOT begging for support. But we can and do use EVERYTHING sent to us. Since there are many folks wanting to do just that, I have provided various levels of help you can offer. Whatever YOU feel comfortable with. This is not a donate button. We will continue to patrol regardless and continue to sacrifice for our Folk and Nation either way until Victory or Valhalla. We thank all those who have posted and shown an interest in halting this invasion.

Here is a short list of what folks can forward to their friends and neighbors to send:

Yes. We will be continuing patrols throughout the summer. All aide is a plus. Money is OK. But you can also send:

Gas Cards (we drive tanks full per day per vehicle down the trails)

Prepaid Cell Phones (this helps for operational security)

Tons of glow sticks/cyalume night sticks (even the 99 cent kind are OK)

Batteries- Dcell, 123A lithium camera type, AA, AAA, and others to be announced

Shotgun bandolears (used is ok)

Canteens, bandanas, chapstick, sanitary wipes, pocket notebooks and sharpies for notes, ziplock bags all sizes, night vision, spot lights, two way radios.

Any and all things are a big help and applied to the cause. We are NOT paid. All out of pocket volunteers. Even letters of encouragement will be read to the troops and they are a blessing for morale.

thank you so much!

J.T. Ready's Neo-Nazi Patrol for Migrants in the Vekol Valley, and Its Discovery of a Dead Body

JT Ready at the press conference before "securing" the slaughterhouse

For the "reporters" at ABC 15: Ready in neo-Nazi garb

It's not every day that a well-known neo-Nazi offers to take you to a place called "the slaughterhouse."

But that's what Mesa neo-Nazi J.T. Ready did this Saturday, leading a group of neo-Nazis, militia-types and some seriously naive individuals to "secure" an abandoned building by that name on Vekol Road, off Interstate 8.

Ready held a press conference at a picnic area near mile marker 151 along I-8. I split the gas with videographer Dennis Gilman, who'll be posting a video shortly of the excursion.

Apparently after most of the press had left the area, Ready's group came across a dead body. They also claim to have encountered three live undocumented persons. The Pinal County Sheriff's Office confirmed that they did receive a call about a dead body from the Border Patrol, but that the Maricopa County Sheriff's Office ultimately took the call.

The Maricopa County Medical Examiner confirmed that an unidentified male body was turned over to them today by MCSO, but could offer no other details until an exam is done tomorrow morning. The Border Patrol said they cannot confirm details of three undocumented being turned over to them. I've put in a request for info from the MCSO. J.T. Ready's statement about the find is at the end of this blog post.

On Saturday, Ready had assembled nine or so men and one woman for the press conference. Included in the group was Ready's fellow neo-Nazi Harry Hughes, and National Socialist Movement regional director Jeff Hall, who came in from California.

NSM regional regional director Jeff Hall (last on the right),
with others of Ready's Vekol Valley crew

demo

Some individuals kept their faces hidden. Nevertheless, at least two others were neo-Nazis I'd spotted at other protests or counter-protests in the past.

Ready and his followers were heavily armed with assault rifles and beaucoup clips of ammo. They also had gas masks, black helmets and other gear laid out for the media present, who included a pair from Fox10, a woman from CBS, and others.

Hall, Ready and the others were careful not to exhibit any swastikas or other obvious neo-Nazi symbols during the event. The weekend warriors wore standard surplus camouflage, and hung American flags from the picnic shelters, rather than, say, NSM's swastika-bearing banner.

Ready dodged questions as to why he wasn't flying NSM colors (though his car has a license plate that reads "NSM USA"). He objected to being called a neo-Nazi, and preferred to be regarded simply as a "National Socialist."

I've discussed this issue with Ready at length, and he's even written a letter previously to threaten legal action against New Times, if the paper continues to refer to him as a "neo-Nazi," which is exactly what he is. In fact, the word "Nazi" is itself simply short for Nationalsozialistische Deutsche Arbeiterpartei, the original Nazi party of Hitler fame.

Ready himself has used the word "Nazi" previously, such as when he told an interviewer in Riverside, California during a demonstration there, "Nazi Germany was a great country. Adolf Hitler was an excellent white civil rights leader."

At the Saturday press event, the NSM's Jeff Hall explained that,

"Nazi was created from the word National Socialist to begin with. Basically, it was a catchphrase, used in propaganda. We're National Socialists. We don't hide, we don't water down anything that we do. Or our message. Or our symbols."

I mention all this because Ready was doing exactly that -- watering things down -- for this "border ops" hunt for "narco terrorists," as he described them. Some irresponsible news outlets are helping Ready seem more mainstream, specifically ABC 15, which in a recent report described Ready's operation as a "Citizens group taking border battle into own hands."

Sorry, but a vigilante operation led by a neo-Nazi with a criminal record and a checkered past that includes being court-martialed twice and booted from the Marines -- an operation that includes a heavy contingent of neo-Nazis -- is, in essence, a neo-Nazi patrol, even if a few non-schutzstaffel-wannabes are in the mix.

(Note: In comparing his to similar minuteman operations, Ready slyly mentioned Sean Pearce, state Senator Russell Pearce's son: "The minuteman project, that's a great thing. I was there in 2005, actually with Sean Pearce, Russell Pearce's son. We were right on the line down there. On the Naco line.")

Jess Boggs in his Chewbacca suit

Will Boggs ever make cop after hangin' with the neo-Nazis?

"The few non-National Socialists present included Jess Boggs, a self-proclaimed 21 year-old Apache "tracker" dressed in Chewbacca-esque outfit known as a ghillie suit.

Essentially, Boggs played the part of the token non-white for Ready. Boggs said he was there because he wanted to stop the flow of drugs into the state, and he was carrying an AR-15 assault rifle that Ready had let him borrow.

When I asked Boggs why he wanted to be a part of a gaggle of neo-Nazi racists who believe non-whites are inferior to whites, Ready jumped in.

"We don't make that statement, Steve," he admonished.

Boggs chimed in, "I think it's wrong what you're saying right now."

Ready's patrol "securing" an abandoned building

Thing is, the National Socialist Movement's "25 points" program makes it clear that the party wants an all-white citizenry.

Point four states: "Only members of the nation may be citizens of the state. Only those of pure White blood, whatever their creed, may be members of the nation. Non-citizens may live in America only as guests and must be subject to laws for aliens. Accordingly, no Jew or homosexual may be a member of the nation."

Also, I was reminded of Ready's argument with a Native American man at the May 29 anti-SB 1070 demonstration at the state Capitol where Ready was counter-protesting. Ready told the man to go "enjoy some firewater" and joked about trading the man some beads for his shoes.

"Go dance around naked and enjoy yourself," Ready told him. "Get back to your culture. It's a great culture that invented nothing. Stone tools. Stone age."

At another point in the conversation, he told the same man of Native Americans, "You can't even figure out how to sit on a log. You sat around with your balls in the dirt."

And yet, here Ready had snookered some young man -- putatively an Apache -- into buying his line of hogwash. I felt sorry for Boggs, particularly when he told me later he wanted to be a cop someday, and I gently suggested that his participation in a neo-Nazi event would be a black mark against him.

Shawn from Utah, with Boggs' dog "Tinkerbelle"

He wasn't the only one so snookered. At the last minute Ready's Sand Land Nazi patrol was joined by Michael Baker, who said he was an electrician from Peoria. Baker had heard about the stunt on TV and decided to come down and volunteer his services, his assault rifle, and his .44 caliber handgun.

Baker seemed like a nice enough guy, so he didn't have any problems with being associated with a neo-Nazi led operation?

"I don't see anyone sporting a swastika," he noted. "So, you know, right now I can support them."

What kind of cartoon world do we have to live in before people get it? One where everyone is clearly labeled in an SS uniform and mimicking a fake German accent like they just stepped out of Inglorious Basterds?

The mild-mannered "Shawn" of the Utah Patriot Militia, who had flown from the Beehive State to camp out in the Vekol Valley with JT Ready, didn't seem to grok the insanity of the situation either, though he spent several minutes telling me that one of his big goals was to get the militia movement to run background checks on everyone to weed out the bad apples, like, you know, neo-Nazis, I guess.

"I personally just consider myself to be a patriot," he told me while holding Boggs' chihuahua "Tinkerbelle," adding, "Not everyone here shares the same ideology."

Jeff Hall, suited and booted: Why did he need the mask?
Who knows?

The "securing" of the abandoned slaughterhouse, a site where day trekkers travel to check out with their kids, as you can see from this online photo essay from the Maricopa Off-Road Club, was silly in the extreme.

Ready made it seem as if narco-terrorists might be ready to spring from any corner of the hollow structure. Bogg in his Mr. Snuffleupagus get-up kept the media at bay until Ready called the all-clear. Ready's patrol then cried "to the hill," meaning a ten foot mound of dirt outside the building.

After making this brief climb, Ready tossed a smoke canister into the midst of it, and a purple cloud appeared. Like a Cactus Country Col. Kurtz, Ready announced that the dirt mound would be their campsite for the night. The reason for the purple smoke?

Ready and Boggs take possession of a dirt mound

"We're letting the cartels know this is our territory now," he said.

Um, OK, but wasn't the whole point to engage those vicious narco-terrorists? Unless narco-terrorists are terrified of the color purple.

With the sun waning and nothing going on here at J.T.'s well-armed Boy Scout camp, Gilman and I decided to vamoose. We left behind radio journalist Carlos Galindo, his wife, and another fellow they had with them.

Galindo had gone down there to act as an observer and to offer humanitarian aid if needed to anyone Ready might come across. But the next day, Galindo told me he bugged out around 1 a.m. when it became apparent that Ready was not going to allow his group to follow them on their patrols, as promised.

I think Galindo went down there with good intentions, but I'm glad for his sake that he got out while the getting was good. According to Galindo, things got tense after he caught a couple of Ready's crew sans masks with his nightvision camera. The situation could easily have turned ugly.

Not a neo-Nazi, but he plays with them: Michael Baker of Peoria joined the neo-Nazi-led patrol at the last minute

Early Sunday morning, Ready associate Harry Hughes posted a report to his blog "Just Another Day..." with pictures of the bonfire they'd build, and with the observation that,

"Due to media coverage and the sudden rise in human activity in the area, I don't think any illegal aliens or drugs will pass through this area until after we leave. Smugglers will either take the night off or pick another route."

Of all the National Socialists I've ever met, Hughes is the most personable, and I actually find his blog an amusing read. But though he may have been right about the smugglers (Vekol Valley has been labeled a drug corridor by the Pinal County Sheriffs' Office), he may have been off about the illegal aliens.

Ready issued a press release later that same day claiming that he and his group had come across three migrants and one dead body in the desert. Ready's statement is below, unedited in any way by me. As mentioned above, I'm still gathering details from the authorities to try and confirm portions of his claims.

One interesting aside: Ready had claimed that an unmanned drone from Glenn Spencer's American Border Patrol would be part of his operation, though I witnessed none. I called Spencer about this. He told me that he did not participate in Ready's patrol, and that the FAA has grounded his group's drones. "We haven't had an unmanned drone in five years," he said.

"LINE IN THE SAND Operation LINE IN THE SAND was a resounding success. A multi-ethnic coalition of citizens was assembled to battle the Drug Cartel's narco-terrorists in the Arizona desert on the outskirts of Phoenix metropolitan area. An ad hoc raid team also known as Ready's Rangers was assembled from heavily armed volunteers from around the nation. Patrol Leader J.T. Ready lead an assault on a drug smuggling compound known as the "Slaughter House" by locals. After securing the area without incident a desert command post was established consisting of militia units, humanitarian aide representatives, and national media covering the event. Recon patrols were conducted for twenty four hours in narco-terrorist held territory of the United States. These sweeps *had the overall effect of denying access to the territory from drug cartel incursions and preventing the delivery of chemical warfare in the form of illicit drugs to our community. Local CI's (Confidential Informants) reported seeing drug trains pushed deep into the rugged mountains away from the armed patrols. Three live UDA's (Undocumented Aliens) were captured and one UDA corpse was found by the teams. The crime scene was processed by an inter-agency representation of Pinal Co. Deputies, Maricopa Co. Deputies, and agents from the Bureau of Land Management who responded to calls made by the teams in the vicinity of the anti-terrorist operation. No major injuries were sustained by volunteers. Medical aid was given to treat heat exhaustion injuries of the UDA's by Ready's Rangers. The UDA corpse is currently being processed by the Maricopa County Coroner's office. End of Statement. ### Neo-Nazi who called for landmines on border heads to the desert, armed

Just three weeks ago at a tea party rally in Tempe, he handed out fliers calling for landmines to be placed along the Mexican border to prevent illegal immigrants from crossing into Arizona.

Now, neo-Nazi J.T. Ready says he plans to lead an armed group into the desert south of Phoenix this weekend to put a stop to what he called "narco-terrorists."

Ready appeared decked out in camouflage during an interview Wednesday with KPNX (Channel 12). He showed off a stockpile of guns and ammunition he
